Their cooking was a study in juxtaposition: hot and cold, acidic and starchy, robust and delicate. That's because Peruvian food is all about spices and big flavors, some clean and crisp, others deep and heavy. Every sip of a pisco sour tamed the citrus and chile assault of a ceviche, the fish so fresh it almost crunched between my teeth.

When cooking ribs on the stovetop, keep the water at a simmer rather than a full boil. As noted by ScienceMeetsFood.org, muscle fibers in the meat begin to shrink at a temperature of about 100 F. As the temperature rises to 130 F, the collagen, which is responsible for the toughness in meat, begins to contract and denature. It turns into a gel ...
